2015 International Workshop for Professional Librarians：From ancient times to the present: Preservation of ancient Chinese books and development of contemporary Chinese digital resources

Introduction

The National Central Library and the East Asian Libraries over the world as well as Chinese Studies Institutes have close exchanges. It is vital to understand their use of Chinese Studies resources and their demands. In view of this, the National Central Library has conducted “International Workshop for Professional Librarians” in 2009, 2011 and 2013. Provision is given to overseas East Asian professional librarians to register and participate in the workshop. This year, a 6-days workshop will be opened to East Asian professional librarians of different countries. Experts and scholars are invited to give talks. An approximate number of 30 persons are expected to register. Besides the study program, visits to libraries and database vendors are included.
