The screenshot shows a web browser window displaying the Duke University Libraries website. The page title is "Collective Subscription of Korean e-resources". The navigation menu includes "Home", "Korea Foundation", "e-Korean Studies (EKS)", "Nurimedia", "Other Databases", "Application Documents", "Q & A", and "Contact". The main content area is titled "What is the Collective Subscription of Korean e-resources?" and contains text explaining the effort to make e-resources affordable for overseas libraries. It mentions the Subcommittee on Korean Studies E-Resources, the Korea Foundation, and vendors like e-Korean Studies and Nurimedia. A "Participating Korean Databases" table is also present, listing EKS, KISS, KSI e-book, Kdatabase, and Kpjournal. On the right side, there is a "Subject Guide" for "Miree Ku" with contact information and links, and a "Subcommittee on Korean Studies E-Resources (2012-2014)" section listing members like Hee-Sook Shin, Milkyung Kang, Miree Ku, and Sun-Yeon Lee.

What is the Collective Subscription of Korean e-resources?

In an effort to make the highly requested e-resources affordable to overseas libraries, the Subcommittee on Korean Studies E-Resources negotiates with the two e-resource vendors (e-Koreanstudies and Nurimedia) for group subscription prices, which are much lower than the vendor's list prices. Also, the Korea Foundation provides a grant program to eligible universities to offset the user/subscription fees that are required to access online Korean Studies e-resources.

e-Korean Studies and Nurimedia have been providing online access to many indispensable e-resources for Korean studies to students, faculty, and researchers worldwide.

For detailed information on subscriptions and grant application procedures, please contact each vendor, the Korea Foundation, or the Task Force on Korean Studies E-Resources.
