

SCCTP: Advanced Serials Cataloging Workshop

April 3-4, 2006

IEAS Conference Room, UC-Berkeley

Thanks to our colleagues at UC-Berkeley, who have put in much time and efforts in organizing the event, the Committee on Technical Processing is now ready to announce the Serial Cataloging Cooperative Training Program (SCCTP) "Advanced Serials Cataloging Workshop" in the CEAL 2006 Pre-Conference at the Berkeley campus.

The workshop was arranged as a result of tabulating the participants' responses in the 2005 CTP evaluation, which named it the top requested workshop.

A Brief description and pre-requisite for attending the workshop:

Advanced Serials Cataloging Workshop (Revised 2005) (Available after Sept. 19, 2005)

Description:

The Advanced Serials Cataloging Workshop is an in-depth course on the rules and practices applied to original cataloging of serials. However, there are no specific instructions for electronic serials included in this workshop. While the course focuses on printed serials, the instructions are applicable to serials in any format. It is time for release in 2002 when the forthcoming revision of chapter 12 of the Anglo-American Cataloging Rules (AACR), 2nd edition revised is published.

Course topics include:

- What is a serial in the revised scope of AACR2 and how do serials compare to monographs and integrating resources
- An area-by-area approach to the cataloging of serials, including some of the more complex aspects: uniform titles, links, designations, and title transcription
- Cataloging of special kinds of serials: supplements, commutations, reprints, microform reproductions, and conference publications
- Major and minor changes, particularly what constitutes a major title change in the revised rules
- Discussion of how serial records are used in libraries and displayed in library OPACs

Audience:

The course is designed for people who have at least taken the Basic Serials Cataloging Workshop or who have been active serials catalogers for more than one year and are familiar with MARC serials tagging and fundamental approaches to serials cataloging. While attendees who do not have this background in serials may find parts of the workshop useful, the instructors will not have sufficient time to review basic serials cataloging. (The attendees with little or no serials cataloging experience understand that basic serials cataloging will not be covered).

Contact hours:

The course is a two-day workshop, consisting of 6.5 hours each day for a total of 13 contact hours. It combines lecture with exercises and time for questions, answers and discussion. It will also serve as an excellent self-study resource.

Since the capacity limit is set at 30 people, no more than 2 people from each institution should attend the workshop. Here is some general information for your reference:
