

Prospects for a Cyberinfrastructure CEAL, March 18, 2020

The goal of a cyberinfrastructure is to make the metadata content of online systems in a particular field mutually visible. Taking Chinese studies as an example, it is easy to explain why we need to do this. It is far less easy to show how this can be accomplished and how it can be sustained. I three options that have emerged since the March 2018 Shanghai conference on cyberinfrastructure for historical China Studies.

"Gamla träd och vinterkråkor". Målning. Vertikalrulle. Tusch på papper.
Målningen skildrar en ensam vandra i vinterlandskap. Ett litet vattendrag vid de höga, bara träden, mot himmelen flygande kråkor. Det är ett landskap tillhör Li Cheng-traditionen - ett liknande dock utan fåglarna och vandraren, målning av Wen Zhengming 1542 och fick titeln "Fri kopia av 'Vinterskog' av Li Cheng" (Fang Li Yingqiu, Edwards, The Art of Wen Cheng-ming, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor 1976, s.147-148). Wen excellerade i att måla vinterlandskap med detaljerade grenverk, och denna typen måleri var mycket stor popularitet under hans tid. Speciellt var målningar med demonutrivaren Chong Kui i vinterskog (Hanlin Chong Kui tu), eftersom motivet hade en lyckobringande betydelse. Motivets namn var homonymt med '

"Old trees and winter crows". Painting. Vertical Roller. Ink on paper.
The painting depicts a lone hiker in a winter landscape. A small stream winds between the tall, bare trees, toward the sky, flying crows are visible. It is a landscape that clearly belongs to the Li Cheng tradition - a similar landscape, though without the birds and the wanderer, was painted by Wen Zhengming in 1542 and was given the title "Free copy after 'Winter forest' by Li Cheng" (Fang Li Yingqiu Hanlin) (R Edwards, The Art of Wen Cheng-ming, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor 1976, pp.147-148) Wen excelled in painting the intricate branches of winter landscapes, and this type of painting seems to have enjoyed great popularity during his time. Particularly popular were paintings with the demon exterminator Chong Kui in the winter forest (Hanlin Chong Kui tu), as this motif had a successful meaning - the subject's name was homonymous with

明文徵明樓居圖軸 Living Aloft: Master Liu's Retreat 1543

Wen Zhengming

Wen Zhengming painted Living Aloft for his friend Liu Lin (1474–1561), who, at the age of seventy, had retired from government service but had not yet built a home suitable for his new life. Wen's painting presents an idealized vision of life in retirement: separated from the outside world by a stream and a rustic wall, two friends enjoy each other's company in a two-story hall that is further isolated in a tall grove of trees. Wen elaborates on the pleasures of such a life in his accompanying poem:

Immortals have always delighted in pavilion-living,
Windows open on eight sides-eyebrows smiling.

CrossAsia Fulltext Search

The CrossAsia Fulltext Search is built from textual resources hosted in the CrossAsia Integrated Textrepositary (ITR). It is open to all users. Its aim is to help users find texts and sources relevant to their research questions by performing comprehensive fulltext searches across databases.

Currently, you can search the fulltexts of about 325,000 titles with 52.8 million pages archived in the CrossAsia ITR.

The ITR will grow continuously and more and more fulltexts will be included into the search. In addition to this type of more or less "plain" fulltext searches, CrossAsia will work on the improvement of data exploration and try to find additional modes of navigating the resources. A first attempt is the CrossAsia ITR Explorer.
